

6 Cleaning Duties

That Homeowners Despise

Washing The Bathroom

Tackling the bathroom is often the most hated chore among homeowners, and for good reason. Besides the multitude of tasks needed to clean it fully (toilet, unclogging, mirrors, showers), often you'll need to adopt uncomfortable positions to be able to clean everything.

Cleaning The Stovetop And Oven

Dealing with grease, food smells, and food crumbs can get really messy, so it's not a surprise that cleaning anything kitchen-related is so dreaded by homeowners. However, cleaning a stove takes the cake as it's where grease accumulates the most.

Cleaning Up After Pets

Whether hair around the house or little "accidents," messes caused by pets are unpredictable—surprising you when you may not be in a cleaning mood. On top of that, dealing with these pet messes is not an easy chore, and it often calls for specialized tools.

Washing The Dishes

Just the mere thought of doing the dishes after every meal is enough to make most homeowners despise the chore. Even if you wait for the night to do the dishes, it can get tedious as they accumulate throughout the day—and dry food can get hard to remove!

Folding And Storing Laundry

While doing laundry is relatively simple, the complicated part of the process comes with the next step. Properly folding your clothes can take a good chunk of your time, not to mention sorting and storing them in the drawer or area they belong to.

Sweeping And Vacuuming

It's not that sweeping or vacuuming your home is particularly hard; it's more about the time it could take you to do it thoroughly from start to finish. Also, due to the never-ending cycle of dust, it could become a repetitive and monotonous task pretty quickly.
